DOUBLET, Mme Louis, née Marie-Anne Legendre, dame d'Auneau

Paris 22.VIII.1677–16.V.1771

Portrait draughtsman and pastellist; her work is known from engravings by Petit de Bachaumont, Mariette and the comte de Caylus, and includes a portrait of François de Troy, possibly her teacher. IFF lists Marie-Anne Doublet as an amateur engraver (and incorrectly as “camerière ou fille d’honneur de la reine d’Espagne”, a confusion with her niece Marguerite Bosc, Mme du Guesclin, dame du palais de la reine d’Espagne, Louise-Élisabeth d’Orléans).

The daughter of a fermier général, her sister Marguerite married Antoine Crozat in 1690. In 1698 Marie-Anne married Louis Doublet, secrétaire du roi, and secrétaire des commandements to Monsieur and later to the regent (he was a cousin of Nicolas Doublet de Persan whose daughter Anne-Bonne married the marquis de Saint-Germain-Beaupré, and befriended Rosalba Carriera in Paris in 1720). A son, Louis-Antoine-François Doublet de Breuilpont (1702–c.1774) became garde des sceaux de la reine douairière d’Espagne (Élisabeth d’Orléans), while a daughter, Marguerite-Françoise (1700–1724) married Pierre-Paul Bombarde de Beaulieu. In 1719 Louis Doublet père purchased the baronnie of Auneau for 574,000 livres; three years later he sold it to a colleague, shortly before his death.

Mme Doublet then established in her home at the couvent des Filles-Saint-Thomas a literary salon, known as “la Paroisse” to its habitués, of whom the leading member was Louis Petit de Bachaumont (1790–1771), who lived with her; she died two weeks after him. Her posthumous inventory listed, in the salle de compagnie, twenty-nine portraits “tant peints sur toile qu’en pastel”. The inventaire also included the contents of the apartment reserved for Bachaumont, which listed the two La Tour pastels of him (n. La Tour DOCUMENTATION); they appeared also in Bachaumont’s own inventaire, together with a pastel of the physician Camille Falconet, no doubt that by Mme Doublet herself which Caylus had engraved.

There is a Carmontelle portrait of her at Chantilly (1764).
