

Neil Jeffares, Dictionary of pastellists before 1800

Online edition

DRAGUE, Nicolas

Berlin 1749–31.v.1814

Also Dragus; pastelist active in Berlin. According to the review of the 1788 exhibition in the Journal von und für Deutschland (1789, p. 318), Drague was born in Berlin, and was a self-taught “Mahler von vielen Talenten” who had shown himself already to be a skilful draughtsman. In 1805 “Herr Drague” (perhaps the artist or a relative) appeared in the Berlin Adres-Kalendorf, as the resident “Oekonomus” at the Maison françoise, 61 Friedrichstr., a poorhouse; this suggests that his family were Huguenot refugees. In a street directory of 1808 the artist was listed as Miniatur- und Pastellmaler sowie Gemälde-Restaurateur at 12 Leipzigerstr., Berlin. He (or a homonym – v. infra) appeared in Lyon advertising portraits in oil and pastel as well as drawing lessons (24.VI.1812); connections between Lyon and Berlin must have existed with the Huguenot silk-weavers operating in Köpenick from the early eighteenth century, who no doubt included the incompletely identified M. Guillemain.

Uncertainties about the dates of Drague were resolved with the publication here (2024) of his death certificate and burial in the Französisch-Reformierte Kirche Friedrichstadt, Berlin (Staatliche Archivverwaltung): “Le 31 May 1814 à 2½ heures du soir est mort de pulmonie Nicolas Drague peintre agé de 65 ans natif de Berlin fils de Jean Batiste Drague et de Marianne Serre sa femme. Enterré le 3 Juin au cimetière de la Dorothéestadt.” His father was a maître apothicaire from Montbrison, and his parents had married in Berlin in 1743; he was one of numerous children. On 7.VII.1797, again in the Temple de la Dorothéestadt, “Nicolas Drague, Peintre” was married to Louise Sophie Engelmann from Charlottenbourg. A second marriage took place in the same church on 30.IV.1805, to Chrétienne-Frédérique-Caroline Haberland.

There are confusions with later homonyms; a number of pastels dated well after Nicolas’s death in 1814 were included in previous editions of this entry but are now excluded. It is likely that an 1828 pastel of baron d’Arbaud de Jouges was executed in Dijon where the sitter resided; as this is signed “N. Drague”, it cannot be by the “peintre Jean-Jacques Drague”, born in Berlin on 17.IV.1780, who was a student at the École des beaux-arts in Paris, admitted 20.V.1806 under Barthélémy (he was then living at the hotel de Lyon, 40 rue Saint-Jacques). He applied for naturalisation when living in Autun, 9.V.1832 (Archives nationales, BB/11/333, dossier 1195 B8; granted by royal order, Saint-Cloud, 15.VII.1832). Jean-Jacques may well have been related to Nicolas: his marriage register entry (in Nîmes, 1.IV.1812), reveals him to have been the son of “Jacques Drague militaire retiré et de feu Sophie Engel”, and he is probably the “M. Drague, peintre d’Autun” who, c.1840, acquired in exchange for two of his pictures, a relict known as the épée de saint Émilien (although in fact a 17th century sabre) from the curé de Saint-Emiland; he then attempted to pass it off as the sword of Julius Sacrovir.

Another source describes the “professeur de dessin au collège d’Autun, originaire de Nîmes”, who ran an antiques business. There are no doubt numerous confusions between their work: only one example is known with the signature “J. Drague”. Jean-Jacques was probably the father or possibly brother of the dramatist Joseph Drague, a former pupil at Autun.

Bibliography

Audin & Vial, 1918, I, p. 286; Bénézit; J.-G. Bulliot, Mémoires de la Société éduenne, 1887, XV, pp. 318ff; Harold de Fontenay, “Observations sur...saint Émilien et les Sarrazins”, Mémoires de la Société éduenne, 1872, I, p. 433; France Nerlich, 1793–1843: Ein Lexikon zur Ausbildung deutscher Maler in der französischen Hauptstadt, 2013, I, pp. 58, 330, s.v. Jakob Drague; Saur; Georg Troescher, Kunst- und Künstlerwanderungen in Mitteleuropa, 800–1800: Bd. Deutsche Kunst und Künstler in der französischen und in der niederländischen Kunst, Baden-Baden, 1953, p. 82

Salon critiques

Journal von und für Deutschland, VI, 1789, p. 318:

Von Drague, einem geborenen Berliner und Mahler von vielen Talenten, der sich selbst zu erkennen scheint, indem er ein tüchtiger Zeichner ist und es weit bringen könnte, wenn er mehr Thätigkeit zeigte, ein Frauenzimmerbildniß in Pastell.

Pastels

J.2812.103 Herzog FERDINAND von Braunschweig [?1721–1798], Feldmarschall], pschl, Berlin 1789, no. 159

J.2812.104 Herr GUILLAMAIN, Seidenfabrikant, mit einer Rolle mit Seidenstoff, an der ein Etikett mit der Bezeichnung “Fabric de Côt[?]”, sd “N. Drague pinxit”; & pendant: J.2812.105 seiner Frau, pschl, 34x26 (Köln, Lempertz, 25.IX.2013, Lot 146 repr., est. €800–1000) φ

J.2812.112 Herr Kommendator von KLEIST, pschl, Berlin 1789, no. 160

J.2812.115 Kopf eines Mannes a/r Mengs, pschl, Berlin 1789, no. 161

J.2812.116 Ein junges Manns-Portrait nach der Natur, pschl, Berlin 1797, no. 108

J.2812.117 Ein junges Manns-Portrait nach der Natur, pschl, Berlin 1797, no. 109

J.2812.118 Mannsportrait, Bruststück, Lebensgröße, pschl, Berlin 1798, no. 147

J.2812.119 Junge Mannsportrait, pschl, Berlin 1798, no. 148

J.2812.123 Frauenzimmer-Portrait nach der Natur, pschl, Berlin 1797, no. 110

J.2812.131 Dame in schwarzem, dekolletiertem Kleid mit kurzen Spitzenärmeln, pschl/ppr, 31x23, sd 1809 (Berlin, Leo Spik, 9.X.2008, Lot 55 n.r., est. €600, b/i)

J.2812.142 Die Tragödie [Pyramus und Thisbe], pschl, 37x49, s v., c.1800 (Rudolstadt, Wendl, 6–7.III.2009, Lot 3642 repr., est. €250) φ

