DUPLESSIS, Joseph-Siffred

Carpentras 22.IX.1725 – Versailles 1.IV.1802

A pupil of Frère Imbert in his native Carpentras, Duplessis travelled to Rome (where he is thought to have studied with Subleyras) and Lyon before settling in Paris in 1752. He exhibited in the Salon de Saint-Luc in 1764 and was agréé in 1769, reçu 1774 by the Académie royale; conseiller 1780. His iconic portrait of Louis XVI, commissioned in 1776 for 1200 livres, is known from numerous autograph replicas (six were specified in the commission) and many further copies. Of the various versions of Franklin, whether in a grey silk coat or fur-trimmed red one, confusion still surrounds which was exhibited in the 1779 salon, as one critic commented on “ce portrait en veste de satin blanc”.

Given Duplessis's brilliance in oil portraiture, it is to be regretted that his recorded output of pastels is so small. It appears however that he used pastel occasionally throughout his career, even before his arrival in Paris (despite its poor state, the early pastel of Bernardi may well be his). He brought the same sense of meticulous finish to these works as we know from his oil paintings, with precise details, accurate colours and strong handling.
