PETHER, William

Carlisle c.1739 – Bristol 1821

The son of an organ builder and harpsichord maker, also William Pether, who died in Brownlow Street, London, in 1781; his cousin Abraham was also an artist. Pupil, and later partner, of Thomas Frye (q.v.); in 1754 he is recorded as decorating porcelain for the Bow factory. He trained at Shipley's drawing school, and received a series of prizes from the Society of Arts: third place and then fifth in the drawing competition for under-17s in 1756 and 1757 respectively, third place in the Duke of Richmond's drawing competition in 1759, and second (worth 10 gns) for mezzotint, in 1762. Pether is best known for his mezzotint engravings, many after Joseph Wright of Derby, with whom Pether shared an interest in scientific matters. One engraving was after a pastel by Russell (a Bacchante of 1791), while in 1778 Pether made mezzotints after Vigée Le Brun's lost portraits (perhaps in pastel) of the comte de Provence and his wife. He also worked in miniature, oil and crayon. He exhibited at the Free Society (1761–63), the Society of Artists (1764–80), and the Royal Academy (1781–94, from 12 Friar Street, 32 Oxendon Street and 148 Sloane Street).

The Jones pastel of 1797 is one of only a few examples of Pether's pastels to have survived, but demonstrates a limited, almost monochrome palette, and softly rounded drawing which is likely to be typical of Pether's own creations. As an engraver however his copies after his sources are likely to have been more precisely drawn. One monochrome pastel, of Wright of Derby himself, is inscribed on the stretcher "Joseph Wright of Derby/copied by Wm Pether", which has led it to be catalogued as by Pether from 1868 on; however it is in an identical technique to Wright's own monochrome pastels, is lit from the right as are his other self-portraits, and is far beyond the level Pether ever achieved. The inscription is likely to refer to a lost copy or print.
