TONELLI, Sig.ra Luigi, née Anna Nistri

Florence c.1763–22.VII.1846

Portraitist in miniature and pastel, and watercolourist. At some stage before 1785 she married the violinist Luigi Tonelli (a noted virtuoso, he published a Metodo completo pel violino with Ricordi in Milan in 1823). It appears she had early ambitions to become a singer: according to a report in the Gazzetta toscana (12.II.1780), the royal family showed their appreciation of the performance of the 16-year-old, “una sì vaga ed abile dilettante, la quale applicandosi sotto esperto Maestro, dà sicure speranze di divenire una delle più rinomate Donne nel canto, per esser dotata dalla natura di tutte quelle doti che necessarie sono per divenire eccellente.” However she seems to have abandoned music for painting. She seems to have received her early artistic training in Florence, possibly from Giuseppe Piattoli (q.v.): a conversation piece of the family of Granduca Pietro Leopoldo, executed in collaboration with Piattoli and Giuseppe Fabbrini, is known from an engraving (where her name is recorded as “Torelli”, perhaps a confusion with Sig.ra Torelli, née Lucia Casalini, painter and mother of the artist Stefano Torelli), dated 1785, by Giovanni Battista Cecchi and Benedetto Eredi.

Tonelli’s association with Hugh Douglas Hamilton must already have been established by 1790 when she made a pastel copy for Lord Cowper of his wife and sister-in-law J.722.137. Tonelli came to the attention of Lord Clive during his travels in Italy (1788–90); he had also employed Hamilton to make pastels of members of his family, and Tonelli was said to have been his pupil in the notice that appeared in the World (28.IV.1794). There is no direct evidence that she travelled to Dublin with Hamilton, but it is not impossible. From 1794 she taught drawing to the Clive children, living in London, where she exhibited (from 97 Norton Street, Portland Place) at the Royal Academy in 1794 and 1797. In addition to portraits of the Clive children, she made a pastel copied from an oil by Hamilton of Rebecca Probert, daughter of Clive’s estate agent, John Probert. Evidently she also came into contact with the Biddulph/Myddelton family of Chirk Castle, not far from Lord Clive’s Powis Castle. A group of letters written to Harriett Anne Bisshopp, Baroness Zouche (1787–1870), who was related to several of the artist’s sitters, describe Tonelli’s travels around Britain 1795–1800 (West Sussex Record Office, Parham/2/3/2/3). At Parham in 1795 she was commissioned to make two pastels each of two children. Tonelli was also shown round Strawberry Hill by Horace Walpole on 16.VII.1794 (book of visitors, Correspondence, XII, p. 246).

Works such as the portrait of the collector Henry Blundell, who was in Rome in 1790 collecting marbles, are evidently closely connected with Hamilton, as are the lost portrait of Mrs Flaxman, a close friend of Hamilton, and the full-length portrait of John David La Touche, a copy of a pastel by Hamilton which illustrates her ability to copy his technique minutely, in a manner that is recognisably different from her original works. Miss Probert (supra) is another example; as is another in a private collection, not reproduced here. The curious group of four pastels of the Ormsby family, given to Hamilton in a 2025 sale; have always been catalogued as by Tonelli, and were reported as signed by Tonelli in 1948 and 1967 – one still bears the inscription verso “Anna Tonelli 1793” (for which it is hard to see any other explanation): they too seem to be examples of her imitative skills, probably copying lost Hamilton portraits from several years before (it is possible that the pastel of William Ormsby, smaller and earlier than the others, is the original by Hamilton, but it is one of those said to be signed verso in 1948).

Tonelli accompanied the Clive family to India between 1798 and 1801, embarking on a journey of more than 1000 miles around southern India with Lady Clive and her daughters. Her employer called her “a treasure in every way”, even if her accommodation requirements were much more difficult to satisfy than expected. Several watercolour portraits of the Rajah of Tanjore, from life, were made on this trip; she sent one to Lord Clive, apologising that “the work is very bad but I hope your Lordship will excuse it on account of the Likeness”. An elaborate watercolour of Tipu Sultan enthroned, executed in .VII.1800, also required an apology as she “had no good place to paint in” and that it was “the first thing of the sort she ever did”. That year she was invited by Sir Cecil Bysschopp to return to his family, to which she responded “How happy I shall be when the time of my banishment is over! And more happy in having the hope to see Parham again! I am extremely obliged to you for your kind offers, and for ever I shall remember yours and Lady Bisshopp’s goodness and friendship to me.”

It seems that all the portraits or landscapes she made on this trip were in watercolour or miniature rather than pastel. She is mentioned in three letters written in Madras in .II.1799 by the wife of General Harris, née Anne Carteret Dickson, to her husband: in this she explains that Tonelli had taken Grant Richardson’s bungalow to paint in, and chafed “twelve guineas for likeness in the manner of Lady Clive’s and thirty guineas the miniatures”. She herself was to commission one of the 12 gns (the medium is unclear, perhaps watercolour), while her daughter Anne, Mrs Lushington, sat for a miniature.

Newspaper reports (Calcutta gazette, 9.IV.1801) list Mme Tonelli with Lady Clive and her daughters as sailing on the Castle Eden from Madras to Dover, where they landed 1.XI.1801. Soon after reaching London that month, Tonelli returned to her own family in Florence.

In 1806 the American agent in Paris, Filippo Mazzei, engaged her to bring up his daughter Elisabetta. He provided a description of the family to Thomas Jefferson (letter, 20.VII.1806) with a view to their emigrating to the USA, praising the father, a violinist “the peer of any other”, the two children (born c.1789–90), and the mother who “sings and plays the piano like an expert; knows very well her own language, French, and English; draws and paints with excellent taste; is accomplished in embroidery and all needlework; and knows geography quite well.” Jefferson’s response highlighted the expense of living in a major city, which may have deterred the family; by 2.XI.1807 they were in Pisa with Mazzei, while in 1809 they seem to have settled in Florence. Mario Praz saw a pastel by Anna, dated 1812, in Florence. Schidlof 1964 has a miniature of a young man sd “Anna Tonelli/face in Firenze/1816”.

It is unclear if she was the Signora Tonelli to whom Shelley tried to repay a debt in Florence in 1819, only to be told by a servant that the family had gone to England; however, Maria Gisborne thought Shelley must have mistaken the house, adding “For Mrs Tonelli I have the greatest esteem; but she never stirs from home”, while her husband was inclined to “flutter among the butterflies of fashion.”

Anthony PASQUIN [John Williams], [Royal Academy 1794], Memoirs of the Royal Academicians, London, 1796:

No. 348. Ariadne. Signora ANNA TONELLI.

This is the portrait of the Duchess of Caserta, an Italian lady of high rank, who being said to resemble this bust, assumed the character at a masquerade in Italy. The head-dress is eminently graceful; but, though coloured, it retains something of the marble.

Anon., World, 28.IV.1794

Signora Anna Tonelli, the Florentine, and Pupil of the Crayon Hamilton of Rome, as many of our Readers may remember, has four Crayons in the Anti-Chamber, which, for an Improvvisatore, promise much.

Anon., “Royal Academy”, Morning chronicle, 8.V.1794:

348, Ariadne. Signor ANNA TONELLI.— This is the portrait of the Duchess of Caserta, an Italian lady of high rank, who being said to resemble this bust, assumed the character at a masquerade in Italy. The head-dress is eminently graceful; but though coloured it retains something of the marble.
