ANSPACH, Johannes

Nieder Ingelheim 1752 – Rotterdam 25.I.1823

Johannes (or Johan) Anspach worked in Mannheim before moving to The Hague in 1791 or early 1792 (he advertised in the 's-Gravenhaagsche courant, 29.VI.1791, as a "fijnschilder van Delft naar 's-Gravenhage gekomen"; and again in the same journal that he was back in The Hague, 22.II.1792: "konstschilder van zijn reizen uit Duitsland, weer naar 's-Gravenhage gekomen"). He moved shortly to Rotterdam, where he enrolled in the painters' guild in 1793 and remained until his death, apart from trips to Zwolle, Deventer and Kampen. Unmarried, he lived with his brother Philip Adam Anspach; another brother was Joh. Jacob Anspach.

Anspach was exceptionally prolific, with more than 400 portraits listed in the Iconographisch Bureau in The Hague. More than half of these are later than 1800 and not listed here (many are unidentified and in miniature format). An early nineteenth century advertisement indicates prices of *ƒ*7 glazed and framed, *ƒ*5 unframed for these characteristic small oval portraits. It is likely that they were made with the aid of an optical device such as the physionotrace. Several of his works were engraved. A small number of his portraits have conventional ¾ poses; some of these are posthumous, and were probably taken from earlier portraiture.
